say what was true. The world watched in silence while the

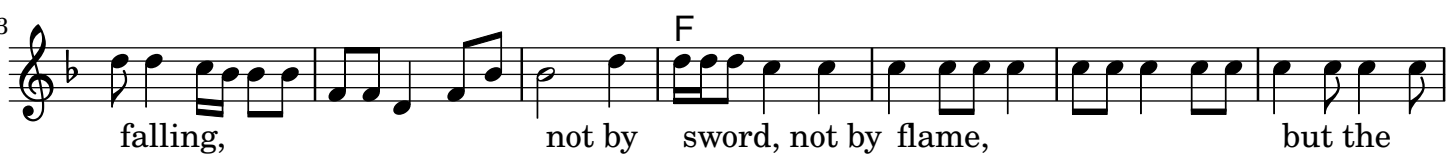

75  F C verse
dead slowly grew. 80

83  C
years now the seeds have been growing blood. They're

90  B $\flat$ F C F
deep in the soil where the old houses stood. Not vengeance, just

98  C B $\flat$
harvest. What was planted comes home. And the scriptures looked

105  C F chorus B $\flat$ holy now, start cracking like stone. So the empires are

113  F
falling, not by sword, not by flame, but the

120  C C 7 C C 7 F
weight of a story. That won't wear their name. Every

128  B $\flat$ F
neighbor who watched it, every hand turned away,

135  carries some of the falling that comes due someday.

143  verse
It was one stolen valley, one people, name,

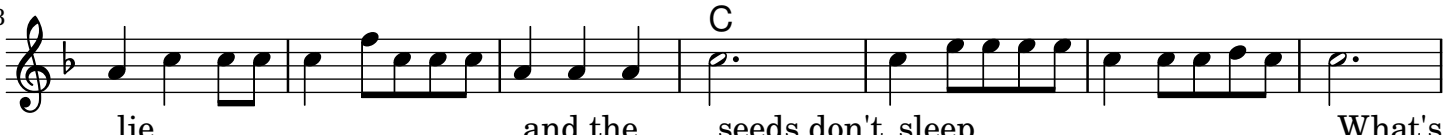

152  till the whole world stood watching and called it the same.

160  Sickness dressed up as safety, the oldest disguise. Steal the land,

168  verse
steal the resource, and claim the prize. I take no

177  joy in an empire's fall. I grieve for the

185  chorus
ones who paid for it all. But the seeds don't 193  lie, and the seeds don't sleep. What's sown in your silence, y'all get to reap.
